

FinXTech names Sageworks as “bank-friendly” partner

By Community Bank Insight Staff, December 9, 2016

Member of FinXTech – powered by Bank Director

Sageworks, a financial information company that provides lending, credit risk and portfolio risk solutions to banks and credit unions, has announced a new partnership with FinXTech, an online platform that bridges the bank and fintech communities.

According to their website, FinXTech provides authoritative, relevant and trusted content to a hugely influential audience including

- Fintech companies who view banks as potentially valuable channels or distribution partners;
- Banks looking to grow and/or innovate with fintech companies’ help and support; and
- Institutional investors, venture capitalists, state and federal regulators, government officials and academics helping to shape the future of banking.

FinXTech connects an exclusive group of qualified fintech companies and service firms with forward looking bank leaders of today. FinXTech Partners have been approved by Bank Director as “bank-friendly,” invested in the future of banking and open to collaboration.

“Sageworks is excited to be named as a FinXTech partner. We take pride in building innovative solutions that help our bank clients stay ahead in the market place and provide borrowers with a superior experience. With this partnership we can collaborate with likeminded institutions and tech companies to provide a more comprehensive offering to banks and help shape the lending industry,” says Scott Ogle, Chief Executive Officer of Sageworks.

For an overview of the Sageworks Lending Solution and how the company is helping institutions streamline their loan processes, visit <http://web.sageworks.com/lending-solution/>.

For the full story featuring Sageworks, visit Community Bank Insight - FinXTech names Sageworks as “bank-friendly” partner